

It's...

the Here Comes The Flood One Sheet

About

Here Comes The Flood (HCTF) is a weblog about music. A rather good one. Founded in June 2004 by Hans Werksman.

Styles covered: anything with a pulse, so: Americana, folk, heavy metal, dance, funk, jazz, country, punk, bluegrass, rock, electronica, avantgarde, pop, jam bands, vaudeville, singer-songwriters. The ability to play the music in a live setting is considered to be a big plus.

No hip-hop, reggae or modern day R&B, no fucking autotune. Tried it, hated it.

Rules for submitting your music for review on HCTF

- HCTF prefers CDs when reviewing albums. Vinyl is even cooler. Cassettes are fine too.
- Allow at least one full track to be posted with a review.
- Hi-res pictures and cover art please. Credit the photographer, so that HCTF can do the same.
- Please properly tag all MP3s.
- Add links to your band's website/socials/label.
- List the line-up of your band (who plays what).
- Live dates when you have them.

Lies, damned lies and statistics

- 10000+ posts so far. 1900+ album reviews. 1000+ single reviews.
- Personnel: 1.
- About 250,000 visitors each month, generating 720,000 page views.
- Updated daily. Yes, daily.

More HCTF on the web

Yup, I'm on Facebook, Instagram, Spotify, Twitter, and Vimeo.

Contact

Here Comes The Flood is run by Hans Werksman, an advanced music geek with excellent taste. He carries a Dutch passport and lives – surprise! – in The Netherlands.

He can be reached at: herecomestheflood@xs4all.nl

Here Comes The Flood
Be it loud, be it soft - it's the music that matters
HCTF – werksman.blogspot.com
herecomestheflood@xs4all.nl